Abstract— In this article let us discuss about Barriers to communication for engineering students. Barriers means obstacle. There are many barriers to communicate, over complicated, unfamiliar, lack of attention & Interest, Distraction or irrelevance, difference in perception and view point. Concentration practice makes to overcome the communication. Writing Practice can significantly increase you to enjoy out of barrier in communication. This paper attempted to study the barriers to communication among Engineering students who belonged to Net generations as the knowledge of the barriers would be useful to organizations to apply them when these Net generation graduates join organizations. The study was conducted among engineering students the paper discusses the seven barriers to communication among engineering students as identified by the respondents of this study. The seven barriers are: 1) Language, 2) Fear of making mistakes, 3) Speaking to teachers, 4) Lack of Practice, 5) Criticism, 6) Lack of listening and 7) Sentence Formation. These barriers to communication among engineering graduates are presented and discussed in the order of preference. Fear of failure is identified by the respondents as number one barrier to communication.

I. INTRODUCTION

Possessing good knowledge of interpersonal relations and being able to achieve the delicate balance that communication requires goes a long way in functioning our reflects to achieve effective communication. Communication patterns lie hello good morning and goodnight etc makes to merely knowledge the person's presence. Giving instruction, evaluating and passing information accurately and concisely fall under this category. Language is not lapse from it, even many native speakers wouldn't have attained proficiency in it, the basics of the language itself highly enough for many to manipulate with the language, but for the second language learners the thrust would be always in higher need. It is mandated for the language users to identify the barriers first, in fact to know what exactly prevents them in attaining proficiency in a language. A good communication can do wonders for a person. It may help in getting a lucrative job offer from the company.

II. INTENT OF THE STUDY

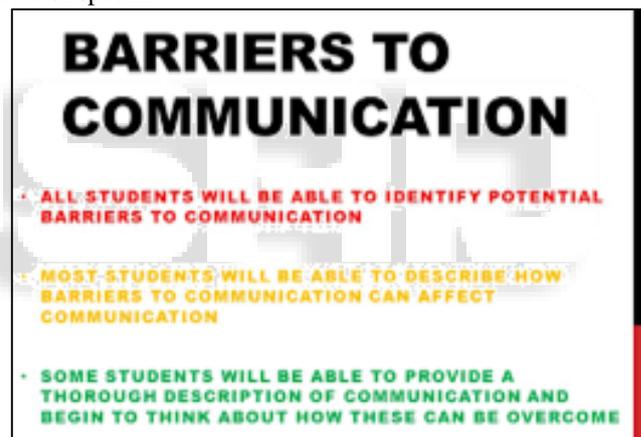

The study was conducted to identify the barriers to communicate among engineering students, the study occur why for third and final year students is that they are very effective in their academic but low contribution in their communication. The English language courses taught at the engineering level have been mostly knowledge based. As an engineering students' success in the on campus recruitment is mainly based on their demonstration of communication skills, the need to improve technical students' communication skills has been emphasized by educationists.

III. FUNDAMENTAL BARRIER IN COMMUNICATION

English has become the inevitable language and students have been learning from school level. But unfortunately they learn English as a Subject even without understanding the syntax its applications. At schools levels they simply crammed and vocabulary in order to get good marks in the exam. It causes them Inability to form sentence grammatically while speaking and Lack of Vocabulary

Though students have sound knowledge in grammar when they are expected to present on a general topic even in front of their peer group members they do stammer and quiet the presentation. Communicating in English has become a toughest and real challenging task for them. Why because of Mispronunciation, Inaccuracy in voice & accent, Improper rate of speech

IV. IMPORTANCE OF COMMUNICATIVE COMPETENCIES FOR ENGINEERS

English language Communication is essential because, it is a universal language and in the globalized environment, good listening, speaking, reading and writing skills are the keys to unlock the doors to success. These skills are vital and help to put up a strong relationship and better consideration in personal and professional life. One must know and understand how important the effective communication is for one's successful life. At present times besides field knowledge, employers look for sound communication skills in job aspirants. Communication skills are essential for engineers, who aspire to carry out their professional practice in the global sports ground. International practice of Engineering is important in this globalization age, as the number of international projects is escalating, and cross-cultural communication and collaboration is on the rise. As English has become the ascendant language, being the most widespread, it influenced the language of communication between professionals internationally.

V. DEDICATION AND DETERMINATION

Although teaching is often done in the isolation of a classroom without the presence of other adults, good teaching involves consultation with colleagues. Colleges that see themselves as professional learning communities encourage teachers to plan lessons together and learn from one another. They take a team approach when problem-solving is needed, especially for difficult students. All this requires excellent communication. Teachers stay abreast of new developments in education by reading journals, listening to new ideas from their administrators and consultants, and sharing and discussing these ideas with colleagues. Care should be taken by the teachers in order to equip themselves with interesting strategies for the classes. So that they can make the students to learn language, the teachers can develop the proficiency skills.

VI. CORRECTIVE MEASURES TO OVERCOME THE BARRIERS OF LANGUAGE

There are no problems without a solution the only deed is to identify and to apply the same. Even for these barriers there are remedies which measures are practically proven by means of applying it. They are unique and vary from skill to skill. English is considered to be one of the easiest languages to learn and speak. With daily practice, students could communicate well with others, improve their skills, expose their skills before others to impress and motivate them. Hence, English even though being a foreign language, is now most commonly used language worldwide.

VII. TO OVERCOME LACK OF VOCABULARY

The language users must find an alternate source to get new words and its meaning, two activities which will certainly create a room to build their vocabulary (i) Reading, (ii) Listening to audios. These two activities will certainly give a measure to build one's vocabulary, since the user will come across lots of new words from which the reader can understand the meanings and the usage of new words. Reading and Listening to audios alone will not get one to know more, whenever one comes across new words they've to refer either to a dictionary or online source to find its meaning and usage, later they've to do some homework by talking to themselves or in front of a mirror by using those words, they've to keep doing this on a regular basis till they get perfect with those words with consistency in their normal usage. More than in reading the user can benefit from listening mode to build their vocabulary, thou it clears the problem of pronunciation too, when a word is pronounced correctly, it definitely sounds beautiful, then almost 20% of proficiency acquires from this act. Apart from vocabulary building the user gets additions benefits of these two activities, it enhances knowledge and resource and keeps them updated if they are in terms of current affairs. In addition to reading and listening the user can use many activities for vocabulary building like playing puzzles and word games like scrabbles and fables etc.

VIII. INTENSIVE READING

You read a newspaper article to get information and facts quickly. Read a novel for pleasure and to enjoy the narrative technique, read a notice to get information. Reading by understanding the text that enables you to enhance your knowledge. The amount of words used in speech are known as rate of speech, normally Indians do have a fast rate of speech in their language, the main reason is anxiousness, and it normally comes to us, since it's our second language. One must understand the fast speech will not make much sense to the listeners, and neither the slow one.

IX. CONCLUSION

Language barriers are common for any language learners in the beginning, but when one get used to with a language it goes off without any intact. The ultimate source to find perfection is practice; hence it is proved that the more on practice the better get perfect. The formulas I've mentioned in my article are few, there are many more can be traced by the language users when they get in more touch with it.
